The departure of the managing editor of the New York Herald on a long and venturesome journey, rendered several changes necessary in the editorial staff; but, beyon this, there are other reasons and deep-moving causes that have tended lately to almost an entire reorganization of the forces of this journal.

The principal of these causes was the combination of a certain class or "ring" of editors, reporters and others, with the secret purpose of fleecing Mr. Bennett, Sr., in a nost ungrateful and even criminal manner. This clique, led by a former correspondent who had been placed in a responsible position in the editorial room, was comsosed exclusively of Western journalists, who, in order to furnish the Western press with news, stole the material of the Herald's special dispatches from all parts of the world, and used the telegraph for the speedy transmission of the stolen property o the newspapers of the West. Although they received a large sum for this journalistic plundering, the proprietors of the papers receiving the benefit of their disnesty could well afford it, considering that Mr. Bennett pays on an average three hundred dollars, in expenses and salaries of correspondents, for each dispatch, good, had, indifferent, interesting or otherwise,

The members of this "ring," however, bent on money-making, were not satisfied with the large returns thus gained over and above their individual salaries, but looking to still greater profits, sought, by the accumulation of powerful elements, to gradually work onward until they might have perfect ontrol of every department of the establishment, thus aiming to make a stupendous fraud on Mr. Bennett, and, moreover, to be supported and perpetuated by his genius

With this design they began a systematic and continuous decrial of Eastern journalists, and one by one, through the employment of insidious means and artful mendacity, they succeeded in ousting a good number of them, filling their places with trustworthy" men from the West.

But a number of shrewd employees of the establishment, foreseeing the end to which the plans of the "ring" were conducting them, set to work to ferret out the causesthe inciting motives to this indiscriminate war upon Eastern journalists. They succeeded finally in obtaining indubitable proofs of the nature and extent of the enormous swindle being perpetrated on Mr. Bennett; and, accordingly, after having who hold themselves at a quarter of a milmade all their preparations, and having lion each, legal tender. Of course an opprocured written evidence of every charge, presented the papers setting forth the whole fraud to Mr. Bennett himself. The result was the discharge of the entire and blass old ones, widows that ought to be ring" and the repression of the boasted wives, and wives that ought to be widows Western enterprise" in the Herald edito- Flora McFlimseys, petroleum, shoddy and This exploded swindle was probably the largest and most remunerative ever attempted. One member of the "ring" alone is said to have cleared from it over four thousand dollars in as many months, and the other members of the delectable cable have probably acted upon the principle of "go thou and do likewise." CONCLUSION OF A MURDER TRIAL

IN BALTIMORE-SCENE IN COURT. The trial of John Clare, indicted for the murder of Henry B. Grove, on the 29th of October, 1865, was concluded on Thursday night in the Circuit Court of Baltimore county, by a verdict of murder in the first degree. It was proved during the trial, exclusively by circumstantial evidence, that Clare, who is a young man of twenty-two or three, shot Grove in the photograph gallery of the latter, in Baltimore, and taking his money and watch, flew to Washington, his place of residence, where he was arrested, and the watch recovered from a man with whom he had pawned it. The Baltimore Sun gives the following account of the scene in the court room :

The case was given to the jury at 7 p. ; Judge Emory informed them that he would keep the court in session one hour to receive their verdict. After the retirement of the jury, but few persons left the court room, except for a brief interval. The anxiety of the persons present, among whom were several ladies, was betrayed by their restlessness of movement and by the expression of their countenances. Even the counsel in the case could not conceal their anxiety. The prisoner, Clare, remained scated in the box, with a bailiff at his side. The court room was lighted only by two or three tallow candles and one oil lamp, and was almost sepulchral in its gloom. Yet, by the dim light, the youthful tenant of the prisoner's box exhibited more emotion than he had previously manifested. There were those near to him, however, to whom he was dear, and whose trepidation, as the crisis of his fate approached, was palpably

Almost at the exact termination of the hour, (8 o'clock,) a movement was heard in the direction of the grand jury room. Immediately every voice was hushed and every footfall suspended. The bailiff in charge of the jury entered the court-room with a lamp in his hand, followed by the Amidst the silence which prevailed, Judge Emory directed the clerk to call the jury, after which the clerk said: "John Clare, hold up your right hand." The prisoner rose, made a step forward, so that he rested against the trial table, and held up his right hand. The clerk said : "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon your verdict?" which was responded to dirmatively. "Who shall say for you?" The Westminister Review (Radical). Answer-"Our foreman." Clerk-"Do you | The North British Review (Free Church). find the prisoner at the bar guilty or not guilty of the matter whereof he is charged?" Amidst the almost breathless silence the foreman responded-"We find the prisoner guilty of mursler in the first degree." At this moment the right arm of the prisoner dropped like lead, and his body fell forward with a heavy thug upon the table before him. Hzlf suppresed evidences of emotion were heard in various directions. The sobs of women were audible, it is best and those who may never yet have not with them, will assure the sobs of women were audible, it is not the progress of European science and the progress of the progress of European science and the progress of the progress of European science and the science with a heavy thug upon the table before and the pale cheek and even the tears of men were visible. Many of the urymen wept at the sight, and few persons n that crowded hall could conceal their emotion. The clerk suspended for a mo-ment the requisite formalities, while two of he bailiffs supported the form of the prisoner, which still rested, apparently inanimate, upon the table. The clerk resumed:

"Your foreman says you find the prisoner of the Reviews. 12,00 for Hackwood and the four Reviews. 15,00 the bailiffs supported the form of the prisguilty of murder in the first degree, and so ou say all," to which all bowed affirmatively. The court directed the clerk to record the verdict. The bailiffs then supported the prisoner to his seat, upon which e reclined, motionless and silent, with his ndkerchief and hands covering his

The counsel for the defense stated that they would file in writing a motion in arthe face of the record," which was done. The attention of the spectators was then igain drawn to the prisoner, who remained in the same position, and they crowded room, which they did. NEGROES ABOVE WEITES. Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware, lately stroduced into the United States Senate the following petition from adopted citizens. It is a good hit upon the legislation of the Rurop: Whereas, During the month of Decemper, 1866, an act passed both Houses of longress, granting to the African race the right of suffrage in the District of Columsia, at the same time excluding from that rivilege all emigrants who have not re ded five years in the country and become staralized, and thus depriving them of the alienable and innate right of manhor uffrage, so highly prized by our loya

Congress; and, Whereas, We venture to believe the laucasian emigrant, whose intellect, indus ary and wealth have contributed so much the unparalleled progress of this country just as good, enlightened and deserving political privileges as the African, just merged from a state of slavery; and, Whereas, The Caucasian emigran though white, is a man possessed of manhood, and, consequently, entitled to manhood suffrage; Therefore, we, the undersigned, natural-zed citizens and emigrants, who have de elared their intention to become citizens of the United States, being all white, of th Caucasian race, and residents of the Dis trict of Columbia, very respectfully, an most devotedly, petition your honorable bodies to amend the above act in such a manner as to put all whites, of the Caucasian race, who are either citizens, or have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, on an equal footing with the negroes, and extend to them the same rights and privileges enjoyed by the latter.
